

DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-6, 8-21, 37-41, 43-54, 70-72, 74-75, 77-78 are allowed.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: The Applicant's invention is directed to downloading a electronic item into a physical item that the user selects. The Applicant arguments regarding the Sharp reference not having second selection of physical item is persuasive.

The Applicant describes the physical item as tattoos, nail treatment and jewelry where the selected electronic item, i.e. software or application, is downloaded. This feature is not taught by the prior art.

The closest prior art is US Patent Pub 2002/0193047 to Weston, where Weston discloses a physical item having RFID attached to the item. And further the RFID being encoded with information that add flavor/quality to the physical item like personality traits, special powers, etc... However, Weston fails to disclose the user selection of the electronic item; the vending machine as explicitly recited in Claim 1, and implied in Claims 37, 70-71, 78 by the term "providing the physical item". And further the "facilitating virtual entity access" is used in the preamble to describe provisioning the item to the user.
